ARMED FORCES NOW ACCEPTING APPLICATIONS FROM OPENLY GAY RECRUITS, BUT LITIGATION LINGERS

Tribune Washington Bureau

Military officials said Tuesday they have begun accepting applications from openly gay and lesbian recruits, creating a dilemma for many homosexuals who long have wanted to join the armed forces but worry their status will be jeopardized if the controversial “don’t ask, don’t tell” policy is re-imposed.

Also Tuesday, a federal judge in California refused to set aside her injunction halting enforcement of the policy, which she had ruled unconstitutional.

Obama administration lawyers are expected to file a formal appeal with the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 9th Circuit in San Francisco to stop her ban and allow the Pentagon to continue its internal review of the policy.

With the policy at this point legally no longer in force, the Pentagon announced that recruiters have begun taking applications from men and women who say they are gay or lesbian. “Recruiters have been given guidance, and they will process applications for applicants who admit they are openly gay or lesbian,” said Cynthia O. Smith, a Pentagon spokeswoman.

Yet Smith noted that recruiters have been told to remind applicants that the court injunction could quickly be reversed. If that occurred, she said, statements by recruits that they are homosexual could be used to reject them immediately or discharge them if they had been accepted into the service.

Under the “don’t ask, don’t tell” law, enacted in 1993 during the Clinton administration, recruits have not been asked about their sexual orientation when they seek to enlist—a policy that the Pentagon said would remain in effect while the litigation continues, she said.

But also under the law, anyone who freely states that he or she is a homosexual is removed from the ranks of the military.

Last week, Clifford L. Stanley, the undersecretary of defense for personnel and readiness, reminded recruiters in a memo not to ask service members or applicants about their sexual orientation.

Many advocates, including Aubrey Sarvis, executive director of the Servicemembers Legal Defense Network, urged would-be recruits to proceed carefully.

“During this interim period of uncertainty,” Sarvis said, “service members must not come out and recruits should use caution if choosing to sign up. The bottom line: If you come out now, it can be used against you in the future by the Pentagon.”

REACTION

Aaron Belkin, director of Palm Center, a think tank on gays and the military at the University of California-Santa Barbara, called the military’s announcement on accepting gay recruits a “stunt” because many legal experts expect the appellate court to reinstate the ban while they review the case.

Meanwhile, supporters of the “don’t ask, don’t tell” policy, such as the conservative Family Research Council, said “homosexuals are desperate” to get into the military, but the government should continue to fight in the courts and on Capitol Hill to keep the ban in place. MCT

Pentagon’s new policy tested immediately

Choi

Tribune Washington Bureau

One of the first to take the opportunity to enlist following the Pentagon’s announcement of its policy to accept applications from openly gay and lesbian recruits was former Army Lt. Dan Choi, a Tustin, Calif., native and Iraq war veteran.

Choi, a West Point graduate, came out on “The Rachel Maddow Show” in March 2009 and was discharged earlier this year for being gay.

Choi, 29, made an event of his reenlistment, tweeting his movements as he strolled through midtown Manhattan to the Times Square recruiting station. There, he rapped on the glass door, entered and asked to enlist in the Marines.

They said he was too old, so Choi filled out papers to re-enlist in the Army. “We’re still in a war, and soldiers are needed,” Choi said. “I have a newfound faith in our government that at least one branch is on the side of the Constitution, is on the side of the people.”

In L.A., Army recruiters were abiding by the Pentagon’s new directive, but they did not report a groundswell of new recruits. “Right now, we can’t ask but they can tell,” said Fernando Sanjurjo, spokesman for the Army’s Los Angeles Recruiting Battalion. “We’re going to do whatever we’re told to do and drive on. But no influx yet.”

Sanjurjo added that potential recruits are being told that the “don’t ask, don’t tell” policy could be reinstated at any time by the appellate courts.

Read it and weep? Not my hate mail

One of the many perks of being a journalist—in addition to the lawsuits—is the hate mail. While I have written publicly since elementary school—mostly defacing lunchroom tables with black Sharpies—I did not receive my first angry letter until the fifth grade, when, following a particularly debilitating breakup, I received a nasty note from my spurned former love, accusing me of being a "trader." In my newly learned cursive, I responded simply, "I think you mean 'traitor.' "

Nowadays, my hate mail is less poetic. I have been called worse than a "trader/traitor," accused of being shallow, superficial and mean. To be fair, sometimes I am all of those things, but only in real life. My writing almost always is meant to be humorous in nature. The irony is I'm trying to make people smile, and instead they feel butthurt.

Considering how insecure I am, one might think I would pout over each insult and habitually cry myself to sleep when someone doesn't like me. Well, you're right. I used to do that, but not anymore.

Hate mail is not that bad. In fact, hate mail is a pleasure—barely a small blip in the inconvenient mail that appears in my inbox each morning. Here is just a sampling.

Spam

I would rather get a big fat dose of a reader disagreeing with everything I say than another piece of junk mail trying to sell me erection pills, even if they are only $1.38. Plus, most hate mail is a one-time attack on your self-esteem, not a daily reminder of (and attack on) your sexual impotence.

My credit card bill

I have no greater enemy than my MasterCard. It torments me every month with an outrageous bill and an even more outrageous interest rate, which leaves me to contemplate what earthly pleasure I will be sacrificing that particular month. Will it be my cell phone? My gym membership? Electricity? At least hate mail doesn't charge me anything to read.

Work- and school-related crap

The last thing I want to read when I get home from a long day of wasting time at the office is additional stuff to waste my time. When I am relaxing, I want to go on YouTube and watch bunnies in a cup or read Wikipedia entries about charismatic cult leaders. Work and school e-mails might be the most offensive mailbox perpetrators, because not only do I feel I "must" read them, but they almost inevitably contain several reply-to-all threads, each more pointless than the last. It's as if everyone at work and school banded together to torture me, so I never feel safe anywhere. I understand strangers sending nasty letters to torment me, but my work colleagues and friends? Now, that's just plain mean.

Character assaults

Senate candidates attack resumes, records in debate

Chicago Tribune

Democrat Alexi Giannoulias and Republican Mark Kirk assailed each other's resumes during a debate broadcast Tuesday that focused relentlessly on who would be the more trustworthy politician to represent Illinois in the U.S. Senate.

Giannoulias hammered at Kirk's embellishment of his military record and the five-term congressman's support of the Bush administration's tax and spending policies. Kirk accused Giannoulias, the state treasurer, of dodging responsibility for his family's failed bank and losses in a college savings program overseen by his office.

"The question, congressman, is, why with this record would you not tell the truth? Why would you make all of this stuff up?" Giannoulias asked Kirk, a Navy Reserve intelligence officer, during the hourlong debate sponsored by the League of Women Voters of Illinois and WLS-TV.

"The ultimate irony [is] that [here's] a man who spends most of his campaign for the Senate criticizing my military record and yet he never served a day in uniform himself," Kirk said of Giannoulias.

Citing loans given by Broadway Bank to convicted felons during Giannoulias' tenure there, Kirk said, "You should have some apologizing to do, too."

The intensity of the debate reflected the closeness of the race with two weeks before the November midterm elections.

Both candidates acknowledged the negative tone of the contest, but said jobs and economy, not name-calling, should be the motivating force for voters.

"I think this campaign certainly has been about resume and background, but at heart, when we vote on November 2nd, it will be about economic philosophy," Kirk said. Giannoulias said, "This has been a brutal campaign, but it's brutal out there for a lot of families."

The debate broke little new ground and both candidates deflected direct questions in an effort to score points against each other.

Giannoulias denied he would be a rubber stamp for President Obama, whose former Senate seat the state treasurer is seeking to fill. "I have said repeatedly, I'm going to vote my conscience," Giannoulias said. "I'm there to help the people of Illinois, not to be a typical Washington, D.C., party hack."

Asked what was good about the Tea Party movement, Kirk applauded the loosely organized group's support for fiscal conservatism. But pressed further, Kirk used the topic to sell himself to Tea Party members—who do not view themselves as aligned with a political party—by describing ways in which he viewed himself as independent on some traditional GOP positions.

With Republicans looking to wrest control of the House from Democrats and pick up a sizable number of Senate seats, the highly expensive Illinois race is viewed nationally as a hometown referendum on the presidency.

Daley backs top cop in handling of police beating probe

Chicago Tribune

Mayor Daley applauded his police superintendent for assigning seven police officers to administrative duties amid allegations that a police sergeant beat a suspect while others watched.

"There was an incident where a young person was handcuffed, and seven police officers watching, someone went over and punched him in the jaw," Daley said while dedicating new sports fields at Marshall Metro High School in the East Garfield Park neighborhood.

"Superintendent [Jody] Weis immediately suspended them, all seven who watched it and the individual that punched the individual who was handcuffed. That's unacceptable conduct. That's unacceptable here, anyplace else. It's unacceptable. And I'm glad the superintendent did what's necessary."

A Coast Guard search boat cruises Lake Michigan on Tuesday after a windsurfer was reported missing in the water off the Northwestern University campus. CHRIS WALKER/TRIBUNE

Authorities search for lake windsurfer

Chicago Tribune

Authorities searched Lake Michigan on Tuesday morning after a report of a missing windsurfer off the Northwestern University campus, but they couldn't find any evidence of an accident, officials said.

The Coast Guard had a 25-foot search boat on the scene and sent a helicopter to continue the search, Lt. Casey Steuer said.

The Evanston Fire Department also had been on the scene with a jet ski but left because it was unable to cover very much area, he said.

Steuer said the report of the missing windsurfer was "not completely confirmed."

An Evanston resident called 911 with the report of a windsurfer in apparent trouble near the Northwestern boathouse, and the Fire Department called out the Coast Guard, he said.

BP PAYOUT

How the oil giant is following up on the largest spill in U.S. history

GETTY IMAGES FILE

Reuters

WILMINGTON, Del. BP said Monday it was committed to waiving the legal cap on its liability from the Gulf oil spill, which could have limited the cost to the oil giant to $75 million plus cleanup costs.

BP already has paid out hundreds of millions of dollars to fishermen, retailers, charter boat captains and property owners who suffered from the spill, the largest in U.S. history.

The company has publicly committed to pay cleanup costs and all "legitimate claims," rather than applying the cap.

Under pressure from the Obama administration, the company also has established a $20 billion compensation fund, but a slew of lawsuits also have been brought against the company and its business partners.

In Monday's court filing, BP urged other defendants in the case to waive the liability cap, according to the filing.

BP also said it reserved the right to seek reimbursement from the other defendants and denied engaging in grossly negligent conduct, which would open the door to potentially huge punitive damages.

BY THE NUMBERS

The Gulf Coast Claims Facility, created to compensate people and businesses for damages related to BP Gulf of Mexico oil spill, has paid $1.45 billion in claims since the organization took over the process from the oil company Aug. 23. Below is a breakdown of payments made through Oct. 18.

Pentagon safety official: shooting was random

4 WASHINGTON A Pentagon official said he believes a shooting early Tuesday at the U.S. Defense Department headquarters was a "random incident."

"We are looking at all the possibilities," Steven E. Calvery, director of the Pentagon Force Protection Agency, said at a news conference late Tuesday morning. "What we have is an isolated incident, so far."

Pentagon police officers, as well as several construction workers in the area, heard at least five shots fired around 4:50 a.m., Pentagon officials said.

As of midday Tuesday, authorities had discovered two bullet fragments in third- and fourth-floor windows on the south side of the building, Calvery said. That part of the Pentagon was empty at the time of the shooting, as it is in the process of being renovated. The bullets shattered but did not go through the windows, which are bulletproof, Calvery said.

The incident prompted a 40-minute shutdown of the entire Pentagon, and authorities conducted an interior sweep of the building shortly after 6 a.m.

Calvery said authorities were unsure who fired the shots and with what kind of gun, though he said he believes they came from a rifle.

PREVIOUS INCIDENT

Tuesday's shooting was the first such incident at the U.S. Defense Department headquarters since March, when John Patrick Bedell pulled a gun from his pocket and began shooting. Bedell, who had a history of mental health problems, later was shot and killed, while two Pentagon police officers sustained superficial injuries in the incident.

Q 101

School is in session for Cubs' new manager, Mike Quade

Chicago Tribune

A man many Cubs fans might not have even known existed is now manager of the title-starved team.

A baseball lifer who wasn't even mentioned as a viable candidate when Lou Piniella first announced his retirement three months ago, Mike Quade edged out fan favorite Ryne Sandberg on Tuesday when he was named to fill the Cubs' managerial vacancy.

Quade signed a two-year deal to return to the Cubs' dugout, ending a long and winding search for Piniella's successor. His regular-guy persona, ability to communicate with modern-day players and high baseball IQ combined to make Quade the "perfect" pick in general manager Jim Hendry's mind.

Many Cubs fans may have viewed Sandberg and Yankees manager Joe Girardi as better alternatives. But Hendry went with his gut in selecting Quade, and Chairman Tom Ricketts put his faith in Hendry in declining to veto the decision.

Hendry said he was "very cognizant" of fans' feelings, but made the decision based on merit.

"You do what's best for the organization, at the end, we couldn't have had a bad choice," Hendry said. "That's what made it hard for me. Forget about how great a player [Sandberg] was. I have a lot of respect for Ryne, and I get along very well with him."

Quade guided the Cubs to a 24-13 record after replacing Piniella on Aug. 23, the second-best record in baseball during that stretch. But now he must prove he can replicate that success over the course of an entire season.

Pitcher Ryan Dempster said the Cubs made the right choice and that it was good to see someone rewarded after spending his whole career waiting for an opportunity to show what he can do.

" 'Q' brings it all, man," Dempster said. "Mentally he's a pretty sharp guy. He has managed enough games, seen enough from different perspectives—coaching first base, coaching third base. ... I felt like he got the best out of each and every player on our team."

When Piniella was introduced to the media four years ago this week and was asked about the "Billy Goat" Curse, he insisted he never had heard of it. Quade, who grew up in Evanston and attended Prospect High, is well aware of all the so-called curses and tragic events in Cubs' history. He said he will "tune out" any talk of the Cubs' 102-year championship drought.

"I lived here, I was raised here, I get it," he said. "You're totally aware of it, and any of the other comments that are made. But it's not going to do us any good as a ballclub, or me as a manager or a person, to have that anywhere near our thoughts on a daily basis."

UPPER MANAGEMENT | QUADE VS. GUILLEN

It wouldn't be a proper welcome for a new Cubs manager unless the White Sox were involved. Mike Quade might be grabbing the headlines now, but there's an accomplished manager on the South Side by the name of Ozzie Guillen. The two will meet on the field for real during the Crosstown Classic, but today they meet in a RedEye faceoff. Play ball! REDEYE

PLAYAHS

GUILLEN: 16 seasons in the major leagues, 13 of them with the White Sox, with a .264 batting average, 28 homers and 619 RBIs.

QUADE: Five years in the minors, with a .261 batting average, six homers and 72 RBIs.

RECORD AS BIG-LEAGUE MANAGER

GUILLEN: 600-535 in seven seasons with the Sox. Oh, and he won a World Series.

QUADE: 24-13 last season with the Cubs.

MANAGERIAL STYLE

GUILLEN: He's not afraid to call out his players, bench them, berate them or demote them—all in public, with colorful language.

QUADE: He's not afraid to bench players for poor play. Just ask Starlin Castro.

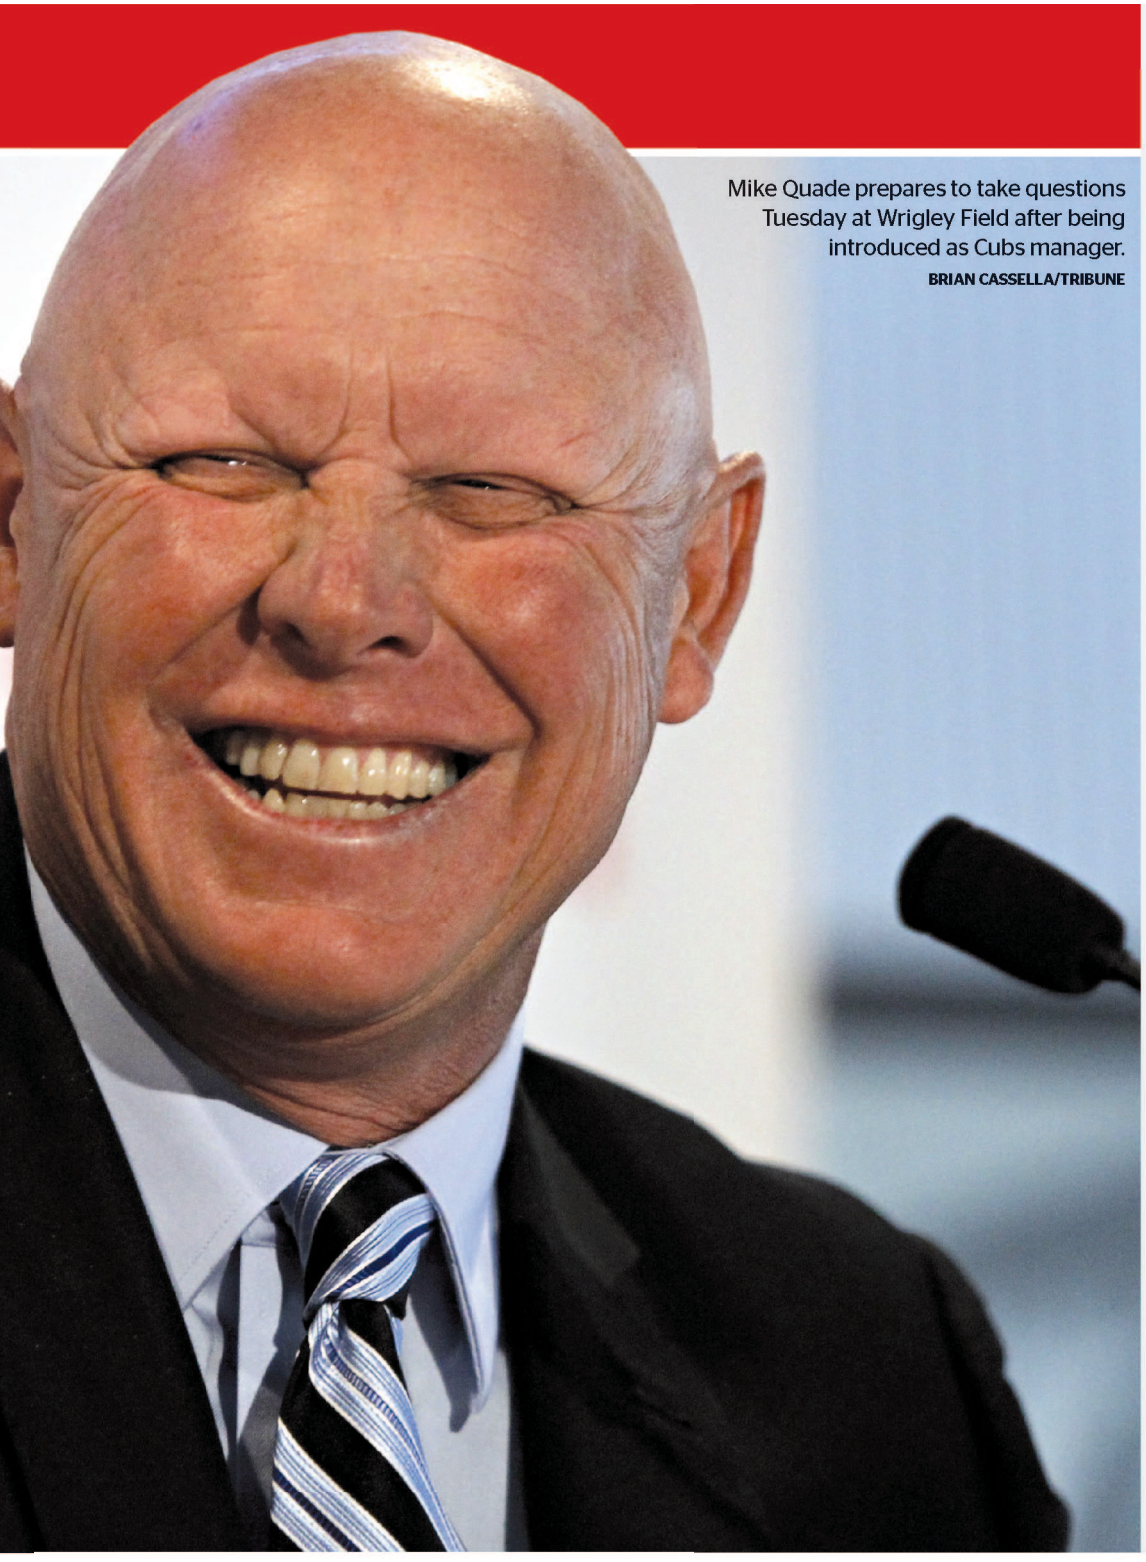
NICKNAME

GUILLEN: Blizzard of Oz

QUADE: Q. By the way, his last name rhymes with "body."

OVERALL WINNER

It's not even close. Ozzie is tops—for now. Whether that changes remains to be seen.



Mike Quade prepares to take questions Tuesday at Wrigley Field after being introduced as Cubs manager.

Fans make their call

We wanted to hear from fans about the hiring of Mike Quade as manager, so we asked our Facebook and Twitter gang to weigh in on the new Cubs manager.

TWITTER

@WrigleyFielder The proof was in the post-Lou record as well as the endorsements of the players.

@badbadleroyb Hope he likes babysitting overpaid babies (cough) Ramirez (cough) Soriano.

@bakersa34 I'm comfortable with the Quade hire. Girardi was a long shot and Ryno wasn't ready.

@windycitywilson The Cubs are gonna feel dumb when Ryno goes and wins in another uniform.

FACEBOOK

Dave Sorrell Saved Ryno some embarrassment.

Geoff Henao Huge Ryne snub. Dislike.

David Williams That's the next head on da "choppin" block!

Thomas Semesky The Cubs turned around under his leadership. He deserves a shot.

No Ryno, no buzz

Though I've insisted I don't care who manages the 2011 Cubs, the sinking disappointment I felt once the job went to Mike Quade said otherwise. I, too, had been seduced by childhood hero Ryne Sandberg's siren song.

While there's something to be said for moves designed to appease the baseball gods rather than the fan base, it's hard to get behind a manger based on six weeks of experience, no pressure to win and an expanded roster, even if he is endorsed by Koyie Hill and Tom Gorzelanny. While I'm not devastated by the Quade hiring, it's hard to get excited about it.

Unfortunately for Cubs fans, 2010 felt like 2009 never ended, and I suspect 2010 and 2011 will blur together in similar fashion. That's not good news for those of us shooting for a Cubs World Series win before we die. Moreover, the Cubs haven't offered Sandberg, the Pacific Coast League manager of the year, a job next season. Anywhere.

Given the Cubs probably won't win much the next two seasons, it really doesn't matter who drives this train. But unlike noodle art, pregame ceremonies and bronze statues, Sandberg would have given Cubs fans something to get excited about.

sacked again
redeyesports@tribune.com

I'm not sure I can do this again.

A new Cubs manager means I'm supposed to be excited about them, right? Sorry, Mike Quade. Can't do it until I see something to get excited about.

That's right. I'm holding my Cubs fandom hostage unless my list of demands are met. I already wear a bag on my head, so why not play the part of criminal. I need to see the following things, or else I'm over the Cubs.

» Tough love. Cubs players, including current ones, have been babied and coddled for too long. Time to bench the bums and play the studs. Who cares how much money they make? If they can't catch a fly ball, they can sit.

» Reach out to Ryne Sandberg. Look, a lot of folks wanted this guy to get the job you got, Q. Offer Ryno any position he wants, make sure the Cubs throw some money at him and give him a visible role. Hell, he can be your spokesman. He has the hair for it.

» Keep Carlos Zambrano happy. I don't care what people say about Big Z, he's one of the league's best. He was the top pitcher in baseball after he returned from his "rehab." Whatever you were doing then, do it next season.

» K.I.S.S. Keep it simple, stupid. Baseball is about hitting a ball. Let's master that. Also, the pitching part should be considered vital as well. Finally, can we get a bunch of guys who know how to go from one base to the next correctly?

» Ban the guest singers. When Harry Caray sang "Take Me Out to the Ballgame," it was special. When a drunken Ozzy Osbourne sang it, it was embarrassing. Talk to the bigwigs about using a tape of Harry doing it. And while you're at it, get Ronnie Woo-Woo banned from every entering Wrigley Field again. Oh, and "Go Cubs Go" has got to go.

There you have it, Manager Q. Get on it ASAP. If you can do this, I'll see you sometime in May. I'll still be wearing the bag though.

No guts ...

Vancouver 24 Hrs.' Guts McTavish sits in to mark the Blackhawks-Canucks game. Don't mention that Cup thing. redeyechicago.com/5on5.

TOPIC	ERNEST WILKINS erwilkins@tribune.com	JULIE DICARO twitter.com/aleagueofherown	SOXMAN redeyechicago.com/5on5	ASHLEY BOND chicagonow.com/bodybybond	GUTS MCTAVISH twitter.com/gutsmctavish24
1 How will the Blackhawks-Vancouver game be different than their playoff series in May?	I won't be watching this time. (Looks around.) What?	Hawks bandwagon fans aren't watching yet, and those who are watching are panicking.	No Vancouver Green Men! They spoiled like brown bananas in the offseason.	I'll feel like I might only have a heart attack on one night, instead of six.	Unlike Niemi, Turco will slide a tape-to-tape pass to a Canuck for a goal.
2 What went through Guts McTavish's head when the Blackhawks won the Stanley Cup?	The same thing Cubbie Julie said when the Quade hire became official, I'm guessing.	Copious amounts of liquid consisting of equal parts blood and Elsinore beer.	Lets just say his cotton stuffing became a giant alcohol swab.	I doubt he was in a coherent state. He probably didn't find out till he sobered up the next day.	A shotgun blast! Coroner said he'd never seen that much cotton plastered against one wall.
3 Toronto is so bad without Chris Bosh ...	... the team ceased to exist when he left and no one noticed.	... Chris Bosh left Toronto? I hadn't heard. (End sarcasm font.)	... they will be the Toronto Oilers before they see postseason play. Oilers, get it?	So that's the town Chris Bosh left. I wonder if there were riots there like in Cleveland after he made his decision.	... the only way to sell tickets is to lure Charles Barkley out of retirement. CB-FORE!
4 Why have the Bulls had so many injuries in the preseason?	Because they're playing preseason basketball! The season ended like last week.	Oh, come now. Are we feigning surprise that Boozer is injured? I won't be part of this charade.	Gym bags are the enemy. Right, Carlos Boozer?	It's better to get them all out of the way now. The real season begins next week.	I bet most NBA preseason injuries are boredom-related.
5 How would you make sure Mike Martz calls more running plays for the Bears?	Get my homegirl Ashley over there to ask. She could get a penguin to buy ice, man.	Hire someone to go Gillooly on Hester and Aromashodu.	Add Matt Forte to his fantasy football roster.	Have him play quarterback at practice and sack him 23 times, so he knows what Jay Cutler feels like.	But I wanna see Cutler get crushed and watch Collins throw more balls away than a vet's assistant.

NFL hits players in their wallets

Three players were fined by the NFL on Tuesday for dangerous hits that violated player safety rules, shortly after the governing body said suspensions could be imposed as a possible sanction.

James Harrison of the Pittsburgh Steelers was docked $75,000 while Brandon Meriweather of the New England Patriots and Dunta Robinson of the Atlanta Falcons were fined $50,000 each.

"Future offenses will result in an escalation of fines up to and including suspension," NFL executive vice president of football operations Ray Anderson said in a statement.

Harrison was penalized for unnecessarily striking a defenseless receiver in the head and neck area during the second quarter of Pittsburgh's 28-10 win against the Cleveland Browns on Sunday.

Anderson noted that Harrison was a repeat offender, having been fined $5,000 for unnecessary roughness in Pittsburgh's Sept. 19 game against the Tennessee Titans.

Meriweather and Robinson were fined for their first violations for unnecessary roughness this season.

Earlier Tuesday, Anderson was asked about a helmet-to-helmet hit in Sunday's Baltimore-New England game in which Patriots safety Meriweather left the ground to stop Ravens tight end Todd Heap.

"That in our view is something that was flagrant, it was egregious," Anderson told ESPN Radio. "And effective immediately, that's going to be looked at a very aggressive level, which could include suspension without pay.

ATH-TWEETS

Bears safety Chris Harris (@chrisharrisNFL) had a lot to say via Twitter about the NFL's crackdown on helmet-to-helmet hits. Here are some of his tweets.

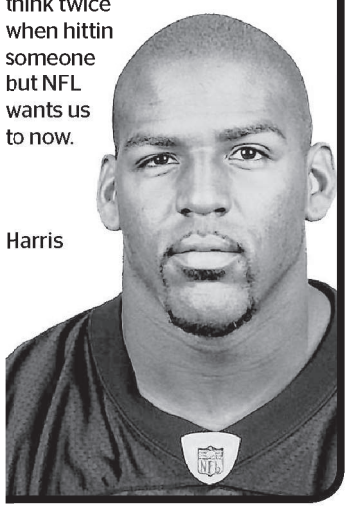
» When you are running that fast you can't change direction in that split second to avoid a ball carriers head.

» I have clips of the Steel Curtain, The Purple People Eaters, and The Monsters of the Midway (1940's). They want us to play like that?

» Maybe we should go back to leather helmets. I bet u wouldn't have the concussions bc u couldn't use ur helmet as a means to tackle.

» I feel the NFL is singling out defensive players. What about the running backs who are running towards me then lower their heads at contact.

» I guarantee u Dick Butkus, Mike Singletary, Richard Dent, Doug Plank, Otis Wilson didn't think twice when hittin someone but NFL wants us to now.



Harris

» Former NFL star linebacker Junior Seau has been released from a San Diego hospital a day after plunging down a seaside cliff in his SUV. Spokeswoman Lisa Ohmstede says Seau spent the night at Scripps La Jolla Hospital and was released Tuesday.

» The Bears decided to cut ties with Charles Grant before the veteran defensive lineman ever got a chance to see the field. Grant's roster spot was taken by rookie Barry Turner, who was elevated from the practice squad. Turner, from Nebraska, was impressive during the preseason.

» Brett Favre has spoken with NFL security official Milt Ahlerich about text messages and lewd photos he allegedly sent to a N.Y. Jets employee two years ago when he played for the team, ESPN reported. The network, citing unidentified sources, said Tuesday that Favre and Ahlerich finished their meeting.

FINAL SCORE

» San Francisco 3, Philadelphia 0. Giants lead series 2-1.

3 Halloween weekend party itineraries for 3 TV-inspired getups

By Geoff George

Partying alone on Halloween weekend can feel just plain sad, but heading out with friends in group costumes makes you a force. First, you need a theme. It's a new decade, so toss your Dharma Initiative jumpsuit and consider something from the current small screen. Choose one of these sure-to-be-popular getups, peruse the itineraries and turn your masquerade weekend into a three-day TV fantasy.

'True Blood'

Wanna stick with the classic Halloween spirit? Here's where you'll fit right in as a vampire, werewolf or other creature of the night.

9 p.m. Oct. 29
Start things off Friday at Bon V (1100 W. Randolph St. $10), transforming into a two-level gothic vampire lair for a two-day event. Upgrade to the open-bar drink package for $40.

9 p.m. Oct. 30
Make a quick stop at People Lounge (1560 N. Milwaukee Ave. no cover) and pair your undead self with a pint of Dead Guy Ale ($4).

10 p.m. Oct. 30
If you're feeling particularly sinister, head to Lux Lounge in Luxbar (18 E. Bellevue Place, no cover) for the Villains Halloween Party—where bad guys rule. Hear spins from DJ Madrid and compete for the costume contest's grand prize: a $250 cocktail party certificate.

5:30 p.m. Oct. 31
Save energy for Sunday evening when Kit Kat Lounge (3700 N. Halsted St., no cover) opens its doors for a full-on "True Blood"-themed soiree. Employees dress as residents of Bon Temps, and you should too.

'Jersey Shore'

The guido lifestyle is all about excess and exclusivity, so here's your lineup of lavish and large-scale events to see and be seen.

8 p.m. Oct. 30
Kick things off at Market (1113 W. Randolph St., $45-$50), where you'll get access to an open bar and appetizers until midnight.

11 p.m. Oct. 30
Attend the Gypsy Curse Ball ($20-$25) to preview Chicago's massive new Palace Nightclub (1242 W. Randolph St.) inside the West Loop's Alhambra Palace. Feel like a VIP as you break in "Chicago's largest dance floor."

11 a.m. Oct. 31
Grab your ticket from the previous night's festivities and head back to Market, serving complimentary brunch for ticket holders until 4 p.m. That should help you recover for Sunday night's finale.

8 p.m. Oct. 31
Close out the weekend at Dead on Division (no cover), a six-bar bash extending to the corner of Division and Rush streets until 1 a.m. Explore different party themes at each venue, and end the night at The Original Mother's (26 W. Division St.) to compete for $1,000 in the costume contest.

'Glee'

Your life's always been a musical and you never really left high school anyway, so dig out your letterman's jacket and get ready for song-and-dance bliss.

8 p.m. Oct. 30
Warm up with tunes from seven DJs, and vie for $1,000 in the costume contest at the Haunted Hotel Ball at Palmer House Hilton (17 E. Monroe St. $40). You can even stay for live music from Canadian up-and-comer Mia Martina (performing a little after midnight).

10 p.m. Oct. 30
If you've had enough choreography, cab it to Timothy O'Toole's (622 N. Fairbanks Court, no cover) to belt out tunes at the Streeterville bar's karaoke party.

4 p.m. Oct. 31
Make like it's homecoming and join the North Halsted Street Halloween Parade (register at 800 W. Belmont Ave.) for a costumed walk through Boystown. Afterward, around 7 p.m., enjoy a block-size party at the end of the parade route between Addison and Grace streets.

FOOD FIGHT

SETTLING DELICIOUS, AGE-OLD DISAGREEMENTS ONE ARGUMENT AT A TIME

Some like their pizza cut in squares, while others swear by slices. For as long as we've been stuffing our faces with delicious food, there have been conflicts about the way we eat it. Addressing such fervent foodie issues, we are proud to introduce Food Fight.

This week: Have you had enough of cupcakes?

METROMIX FILE

ENOUGH ALREADY!

Cupcakes, I don't care how cute and delicious you are. You totally have oversaturated the Chicago treat market. First, there was the mounting number of cupcake shops, and now cupcake trucks have followed. I mean, we're up to our ears in buttercream, for crying out loud! The trend is so tired that I can't help but call for a new sweet to come into the spotlight. May I respectfully nominate the delicious French macaron, which is equally adorable and portable?

—LISA ARNETT

VS

KEEP 'EM COMING!

Imagine, if you can stomach the thought, a world without ice cream shops, bakeries or cookie stalls. Nuts, right? Why is cupcake saturation even up for discussion? Yes, we've got more shops, trucks and flavors today devoted to this mini-treat than you ever thought possible. Should we not celebrate the triumph of snack-size, mobile deliciousness? We should. And is there not room for more competition in this arena? There is. Let's expand on the trend and bring brownies, cheesecake and pie into the ring. I know one person who'd be happy to jump on that train.

DJ duo Moneypenny wants to be the Bond bad girl—and enjoy both the tricks and the treats

SEE THEM LIVE

In many ways Jessica Gonyea (DJ A-Cup) and Chess Hubbard (Mother Hubbard), the local DJ duo collectively known as Moneypenny, have led a charmed existence. The pair's first show was a short-notice gig opening for Swedish dance-pop siren Robyn at Park West in May 2008, and their music—a club-friendly mash-up of electronica, indie rock, industrial and pop—already has been featured on multiple TV shows, including MTV's "The Hills." This week, the pair celebrates the release of its second single, "Destroy," with a show at Berlin, all building to a debut EP planned for 2011.

But reached by telephone at her Roscoe Village apartment, the 26-year-old Gonyea, who first cut her teeth in the local indie-rock band Office, plays down the stylish sheen that glosses everything from Moneypenny's elegant press photos to their online bio: "Early on, Moneypenny established a reputation for playing only the best, high-profile gigs." Instead, she talks up Kenny Powers of "Eastbound & Down," "Jersey Shore's" Snooki and how it feels to hail a cab dressed as a Mighty Morphin Power Ranger.

Does the Moneypenny name indicate that you're both hard-core James Bond fans?
I've seen most of the movies, but I'm not obsessed with them. Chess is more hard-core about it than I am. When we got together and started DJing, I came up with the name Rocktapussy, which was definitely a play on James Bond. But once we started making original tunes, we changed the name [to Moneypenny] before it became an issue. I didn't want people to think we were a joke band.

Would you prefer to be a Bond villain or a Bond girl?
The Bond villains always seem to get it in the end, don't they? But the Bond girls have their moments of helplessness. I guess I'd rather be the villain that lures Bond into her web of deceit and trickery and still gets to sleep with him.

Where did learning the turntables rank on the difficulty scale compared to keyboard and guitar?
DJing was the easiest, synths number two and guitar a distant three. Learning how to DJ came naturally for me. ... The most important thing is song selection; if you don't have that, you're not going to be a good DJ. Other than that, a lot of it is muscle memory. It's almost like playing a video game.

Were you surprised when you had songs licensed for "The Hills" and "The City" on MTV?
Oh my God, yeah.

JESSICA GONYEA PERSONALITY TEST

What's the last album you bought? Big Boi, "Sir Lucious Left Foot: The Son of Chico Dusty." "And I actually paid for it, too, because I didn't want to get a crappy copy off the Internet."
Best concert you've seen in the last year? Peaches at Metro
New band you don't know personally that deserves to be big? Crocodiles. "I saw them at Empty Bottle a few weeks ago on the free Monday and they were awesome."
Favorite movie ever? "Wayne's World." "It's one movie that I can quote the entire way through."

Do you watch either of those shows?
Oh, no. I felt really bad too, because my family is so supportive and really into everything we do. I'll tell them, "Oh, my song is going to be in the background of this one show, but don't tune in tonight. Just wait and I'll send you a YouTube clip of it." They'll be like, "No, we're going to watch it!" Then I feel bad because my grandparents are sitting there watching MTV for an hour and a half waiting for a five-second snippet of me singing to come on.

What show do you want to hear your music on?
OK, this is never going to happen, but "Eastbound & Down" would be so great. It would probably have to [appear] in the context of a strip club. I'd also have a certain amount of guilty pride if I heard someone say, "Oh, I heard your stuff on 'Jersey Shore' and someone totally punched Snooki in the face to your song!"

Your press photos are all fairly elegant, and your bio talks about the exclusive clubs you've DJ'd, so I was hoping you could tell me something about yourself that's not glamorous.
I was working at a club once and they didn't have anybody for the Jell-O wrestling competition. "OK, so what do I have to wear?" "Wear something tight." They actually meant to wear booty shorts and a cut-off top, but I showed up in a pink Mighty Morphin Power Rangers outfit with a David Bowie lightning bolt painted across my face. The promoter got super [angry] and paired me up with someone who was 6'4" and maybe 250 pounds. So I'm in the Jell-O with this beast on top of me when I realized I didn't bring a change of clothes. Hands-down, my least glamorous moment is standing in front of the nightclub in a pink Power Ranger outfit dripping blue Jell-O and praying a cab would pick me up.

TRIBUNE FILE

Kings of Leon
"Come Around Sundown"
RCA

The cover of Kings of Leon's fifth album—a postcard-worthy shot of a couple of beachside palm trees at sundown—radiates peace and tranquility. Yet the music contained within is restless, unsteady and, at times, downright bleak. "All the black inside me is slowly seeping from the bone," Caleb Followill moans on "Pyro." "Everything I cherish is slowly dying or it's gone."

Recorded in New York City with producers Angelo Petraglia and Jacquire King, who also assisted with 2008's "Only by the Night," "Sundown" maintains much of that record's high-gloss finish, though the Tennessee crew sounds less certain about the stadium aspirations that seemed to drive bombastic tunes such as "Use Somebody" and "Sex on Fire."

Instead, the band reaches back to its roots on the pretty, fiddle-flecked "Back Down South," dabbles in gospel-rock revival on "Radioactive" and delivers a throbbing, distorted gem in album-opener "The End." Here's hoping the Kings continue to chip away at their polished veneer; the scar tissue and odd curves beneath the gloss have far more appeal.

The decade's most popular play gets a fresh formula 'Proof' positive

By Julia Borcherts

The Pulitzer and Tony Award-winning drama "Proof," by Chicago native David Auburn, is the most-produced play of the past decade, according to the Theatre Communications Group. But Chicago Fusion Theatre isn't worried about it. "We wanted to propel our brand by taking something that's recognizable but apply our mission and our aesthetic to it," said managing director Natalie DiCristofano, who joined the storefront theater company in 2007 and stars this week in its production of "Proof."

DiCristofano plays the role of Catherine, a young woman who drops out of college to care for her father, a mentally ill University of Chicago mathematics professor with a brain for breakthrough discoveries. After his death, Catherine and her immediate circle start to wonder how much of her father's brilliance—and madness—she's inherited. We called up DiCristofano to find out how she's tackling the role.

What makes your production different from all the others?
We took it out of the standard, realistic, front-porch setting, and the set concepts became what could be inside Catherine's mind. Through that came the concept of showing the proof, the actual mathematics. A lot of times, [the math in the play is] hidden in a notebook and you never see what it actually is, so we're bringing that out—each character works on it, either analyzing it or actually writing it throughout the show.

How did you make this role your own?
I first read this play in college and I was not a fan of the character. [Laughs.] She's whiny and kind of a brat. So the way I've approached it is, "What's likable about her?" I re-read and re-read and I was like, "You know what? She's kind of funny and kind of cynical, and I'm that way too. Maybe I can apply these things to give her a different flavor and a different type of personality than what's expected."

Are you also math genius?
Absolutely not. [Laughs.] We were fortunate to go to University of Chicago, and [math professor] John Boller gave us a tour and then started explaining proofs to us. He gave us books that we're using for the writing that ends up on the walls. It's been a great way to celebrate fusion, another part of our philosophy.

Why is storefront theater such a success in Chicago?
There's a real sense of community. We're all working on a shoestring budget, but everyone is so willing to help out, and that ends up creating better work for audiences to see because somebody can borrow a lighting instrument that they wouldn't have had if they didn't have friends at [another] company.

And there's not a lot of ego. Everybody is very realistic about the work that they're doing and nobody thinks that they're too good to do anything. Sometimes with people, I'm like, "Man, you are so talented and you're doing this show for two people, week after week." But they're doing it because they love it, not because it's a paycheck.

This Clint Eastwood-Matt Damon thing really isn't working out

Following his twin brother's death, a boy (George McLaren) in London wants to understand what happens when we die; in France, journalist Marie LeLay (Cecile de France) explores the notion of the afterlife following her own near-death experience in a Southeast Asian tsunami; and in San Francisco, George (Matt Damon) tries to put his days of doing psychic readings behind him. Gee, think the three story lines will converge "Babel"-style?

The buzz: Clint "I'll make one movie per year if I damn well please" Eastwood re-teams with Damon after last year's disappointing "Invictus." Maybe acclaimed screenwriter Peter Morgan ("Frost/Nixon," "The Queen") can add some depth to the potentially spooky setup.

The verdict: Humanity's universal curiosities haven't been so vapidly exploited since "The Da Vinci Code." "Hereafter," opening Wednesday, is all sorrow and no power, unifying viewers in the sense that whatever your beliefs are, you'll still likely find this to be hollow rubbish. George's and Marie's visions are only of the routine, blurry-white-light-and-people-standing-around sort. That's not any more profound than the eventual implication that the dead also are psychic, but only sometimes. You don't have to be spiritually gifted to forecast everything. The disappointing surprise is seeing Eastwood truly settle into a non-inquisitive rut as a filmmaker of foolish generalities.

Matt Damon in 'Hereafter'

Did you know? Bryce Dallas Howard co-stars as a woman who flirts with George while they partner up in an Italian cooking class. If you didn't think a movie about loss and the afterlife would find a way to turn into a romance, you'd be wrong. MATT PAIS IS THE METROMIX MOVIES PRODUCER. MPAIS@TRIBUNE.COM

VIDEO GAME
‘Fallout: New Vegas’
XB360, PS3, PC

How do you top a legendary video game set in post-apocalyptic Washington, D.C.? Vegas, baby, Vegas. As implied by the name, “Fallout: New Vegas” is set in a bombed-out Mojave Desert, where your character must interact with a variety of others, battle a host of mutated or radiation-poisoned foes and eventually find his/her way to the bright lights of the New Vegas strip. The bad news: “New Vegas” feels so close to “Fallout 3” that it almost seems like a flashy expansion pack. The good news: there’s so much to see and explore and shoot that it’s still a better value than almost every other video game out there. RYAN SMITH FOR REDEYE, VISIT CHICAGONOW.COM/GAMESMITH

Your grandmother may have worn or perhaps still wears brooches on her cardigans. But the pieces don’t have to seem dowdy. Brooches in 2010 are cool and an unexpected accessory for a little black dress or work blazer. DVD
‘Predators’
Available now

The plot for “Predators,” a continuation of the alien-hunter series that started in 1987, could be written on a napkin: Eight experts in killing are dropped on an alien planet to be hunted. The onus falls on director Nimrod Antal and the film’s cast to make the moments between the killings entertaining. The actors put just enough spin on these roles to make them more than just stereotypes. That’s why the film will hold your attention between the bangs and booms. On that level, this film is better than the original. RICK BENTLEY, THE FRESNO BEE

TRACK-OFF
‘Chase the Money’
Joka featuring Spud
*Listen at redeyechicago.com/kylesfiles

Joka chased the money all the way to a Track-off win in this week’s online battle of the beats and rhymes. The local rapper, with a guest assist from Track-off alum Spud, eked out a slim defeat over RICHKIDZ. Joka took a different twist on what one reader accurately described as an oft-visited rap topic, making the most of on-point analogies and a sparse instrumental. Vote in a new Track-off every Monday. KYRA KYLES, REDEYE

Belushi brings touch of Chicago to Vegas

Chicago Tribune

Leave it to hometown boy Jim Belushi to find a way to work the Chicago Bears fight song into a legal dramedy set in Las Vegas.

If CBS doesn't pull the plug too soon on the critically maligned "The Defenders," at 9 p.m. Wednesdays, local viewers can look forward to Belushi's Chicago-raised character, Nick Morelli, belting out "Bear Down, Chicago Bears" in an upcoming episode.

The episode will revolve around the theft of a Super Bowl ring that belonged to former Bear Mike Singletary. In another episode, after punching a villainous character from Detroit, Morelli derides the downed man for the Red Wings "stealing [Chris] Chelios from the Blackhawks."

The Second City alum and kid brother to John "Joliet Jake" Belushi wasn't coy about injecting his love of all things Chicago into the story. "You know, I have an influence," Belushi joked during a recent break from filming of the show he called a "courtroom drama on steroids."

Chicago, Belushi said, is "where I'm connected and it's where my sense of humor is rooted. When you draw back on experiences and things, you go back to what you're connected to."

The Wheaton native's return to network TV after his eight-year run playing lovable lout Jim Orenthal on ABC's "According To Jim" has been good, though inconsistent. Filmed in Las Vegas, "Defenders' " highly rated Sept. 22 premiere was followed by two weeks of ratings declines, only to rebound last week, winning its 9 p.m. time slot and topping NBC's "Law and Order: Los Angeles," according to the latest Nielsen ratings.

While the show has been called contrived and uninteresting by some critics, Belushi is up front about the fact that he'd much rather be popular than critically acclaimed.

"In TV, when you get great reviews, it's a [expletive] death knell," Belushi said, quickly pointing to Fox's critical darling "Lone Star," recently canceled after only two airings.

"To have 11 million people watch your show when there's 85 critics writing about you. It's like 'Guys, sorry. I love you, I love how hard you work, but it doesn't matter,' " he said. "I'm not looking for you guys' approval, I'm looking for 11 million [viewers'] approval."

Belushi's Morelli co-heads a flashy, if not slightly bottom-feeding, Vegas law firm with the brash partner, Pete Kaczmarek, played by Jerry O'Connell.

Morelli is a shark with a velvet touch; a wry-smiling, smooth-operating defense attorney who wears his blue collar background and simple values as well as he wears his fine Italian suits. Belushi said he spent time with the real-life Vegas legal team the show is based on, as well as in real courtrooms.

"The guy I'm playing has got great bedside manners and is very charming," Belushi said. "From his point of view, your whole job is to win the jury. So everything is a performance."

Pink products that do their part for charity

MCT

It's October, which means it's Breast Cancer Awareness Month.

Stores have been awash in pink products—everything from perky pens to pretty blouses. As fundraisers go, breast cancer awareness products are lucrative. While there is no information on the overall amount of money these products raise—there are so many charities and products and no central clearinghouse—Susan G. Komen for the Cure, one of the nation's largest breast cancer charities, says its pink products raised $51 million in 2010, compared with $49 million in 2009.

And with more cause-related products hitting the market every year, there's more competition for our money.

Two good places to look for independent information on the status of various charities are charitynavigator.org and give.org, which is run by the Better Business Bureau.

Read on for pink products that are both stylish and charitable. A 4 rating is "exceptional."

Al Piemonte Ford offers travel incentive.

To make it more affordable for shoppers to meet face to face with Al Piemonte Ford's credit department, the dealership has added a gift card incentive. Now customers who visit the Credit Department will be rewarded with a $10 Target Gift Card.

Finance personnel will be on hand to meet with them and access their ability to get financing for a new or used vehicle. Ed Dixon, "The Credit Coach" from the dealership, sees this as another step in making the customer experience "friendly and inviting".

"We recognize that sometimes people travel a considerable distance to come to our dealership and we want to reward them for their effort!"

Ed Dixon "Credit Coach"

Shoppers can start the process by calling a 24 hour toll free number dedicated to financing. The number is 1-800-NEXT CREDIT or 1-800-639-8273.

Extended Service Hours Announced

Life just got easier for customers who need to service their vehicles in the evening or on Saturdays. Al Piemonte Ford and their Quick Lane just announced extended service hours. Service will be offered Monday through Friday from 7 am to 9 pm and on Saturday from 7:30 am to 5 pm. The Quick Lane services all vehiclemakes and models.

Additionally, the dealership will begin offering oil changes for $19.95. "With extended service hours and reduced prices like our $19.95 oil change we hope car owners choose us for all their service needs", explained Al Piemonte.

Guests work out at the original Biggest Loser Resort in Ivins, Utah. REUTERS

New spas are 'Big' winners

Tribune Newspapers

The new Biggest Loser Resort at Fitness Ridge in Malibu, Calif., already is booked through mid-November, despite a debut amid record heat that would have challenged the most dogged contestant on the NBC show that inspired it.

The Malibu resort is the second one to build itself around the "Biggest Loser" theme, loosely fashioned after the weight-loss reality show; the first is in Utah.

Though rustic, the Malibu location offers amenities such as the newest fitness equipment, a pool and an array of salon services, including massage, makeup and manicures. Each day, the 80 guests each dine on fewer than 1,500 calories, exercise for several hours and attend lectures on health and nutrition. They pay $2,295 a week and up, depending on the type of room. Spa services are extra.

Make me a match

Hey ladies: Looking to snag a quality mate? "Millionaire Matchmaker" Patti Stanger suggests you hang out at a steakhouse. In an interview with USA Today, the "CEO of love," whose show just started up again in New York, lists steakhouses, Comic-Con and the Consumer Electronics Show as the top three places to meet men. Stanger, who is single, calls New York women "skinny and bitter."

Even Jackassier

Hold on to your butts, "Jackass" might not be resting for long. The gross-out juggernaut "Jackass 3D," which made $50 million in its opening weekend, might spawn a sequel, star Johnny Knoxville told the Los Angeles Times. "We shot two movies' worth of footage," he said. "We have so many bits that we never even turned in to Paramount because we were so swamped with ideas."

Dear John (Mayer)?

Taylor Swift, who collaborated with John Mayer on his song "Half of My Heart," has a song called "Dear John" on her new album, and some are speculating that the song is about Mayer. Asked about it, Swift told people.com, "A lot of times when people's relationships end, they write an e-mail to that person and say everything that they wish they would have said. A lot of times they don't push send."
